THE RECRUITMENT PROCESS

It is our policy to hire consultants with previous experience gained in the recruitment business or drawn from the sector in which they will specialise. Our senior consultants go on to join the industry's trade body the Recruitment and Employment Confederation, which sets quality guidelines.

Working for clients, Media Contacts' recruitment process is nothing if thorough. Having checked each applicant's written credentials, we then subject those selected as potentially suitable to an in-depth telephone screening. Only then is a short-list invited for face-to-face interviews with two separate consultants.

Unlike some recruitment companies, Media Contacts' consultants handle the entire recruitment process: account managing clients' vacancies and vetting candidates. In our experience this allows consultants to remain fully informed. After all, there's no room for misinterpretation. The client also needs only one main point of contact for the entire assignment.

THE SERVICE

Operating distinct, specialist (though not disparate) divisions means that we employ experts rather generalists. Yet, with a strong sense of team ethos coupled with the experience from recruiting the humblest chief executive to the loftiest production assistant, we offer companies a full recruitment service with a cross media capability.

So whatever the vacancy, whatever the department, whatever the company - we have the resources to find you the right person, right now.

Depending on the task in hand, we will advise on the most effective recruitment strategy; file search, advertising selection or headhunt.

The applicant databases we maintain contain details of many thousands of candidates, which can be searched using leading-edge software, to identify potentially suitable job seekers. This extensive database is kept up to date with a heavy advertising presence in the national, trade and specialist press, online, through careers fairs and trade exhibitions.
